Why Blue Economy is important to us?

Blue economy by the numbers The United Nations Environment Program estimates that half the world's population lives within 60 kilometers of the sea. The blue economy relates to the sustainable use and conservation of marine and aquatic resources, including: Seas, oceans, lakes, and rivers. Blue economy relates directly to SDG14 and indirectly to many others such as SDG1, SDG2, SDG3, SDG13, and SDG15.

Blue Economy includes many activities such as fishing, tourism, maritime transport, exploration of natural resources such as gas and oil, as well as emerging activities such as fish farming, extractive activity of seabed minerals and marine biotechnology, as well as other activities. It aims to develop and promote economic growth, fight poverty and improve the quality of life based on the various wealth of the sea with striving for its sustainability and preservation.

One of the main advantages of the "Blue Economy" is the fact that it is a clean and efficient economy that relies on low carbon emissions in various activities. The main motive is to reduce carbon emissions, reduce pollution and make good use of energy resources. Besides the good exploitation of natural resources and the conservation of biodiversity and other environmental services provided by the ecosystem.
